We are experiencing the most economically unstable period and socially erratic period in the history of the modern world. This period is being marked with extreme fluctuations in the stock, commodity and currency markets accompanied by severe and sometimes violent and deadly social disruptions including historic pandemics, conflicts, wars, riots and even regime changing coups. As is typical of such times, many fortunes will be both made and lost during this period. After talking with many business owners, executives, professionals, scholars and government officials from around the world, the writer believes that for the financially astute investor, this is a time of unprecedented opportunity given the global trade unbalances and distortions in the commodity and currency markets that exists. The Financial Crisis Report is a free compilation of the opinions of David Miyoshi as well as of those advisors he himself subscribes to (with appropriate credits given) on how to survive and even benefit during this historic time of crisis in the world. The writer receives no compensation of any kind from any advisors whose articles or ideas may appear in this report. The reader is welcomed to check on all sources of information mentioned herein. World Economic Freedom Comparison

Economic freedom is the fundamental right of every human to control his or her own labor and property. In an economically free society, individuals are free to work, produce, consume, and invest in any way they please. In economically free societies, governments allow labor, capital, and goods to move freely, and refrain from coercion or constraint of liberty beyond the extent necessary to protect and maintain liberty itself.

Economic freedom brings greater prosperity. The Index of Economic Freedom documents the positive relationship between economic freedom and a variety of positive social and economic goals. The ideals of economic freedom are strongly associated with healthier societies, cleaner environments, greater per capita wealth, human development, democracy, and poverty elimination.

For much of human history, most individuals have lacked economic freedom and opportunity, condemning them to poverty and deprivation.

Today, arguably we live in the most prosperous time in human history. Poverty, sicknesses, and ignorance have been receding throughout the world, due in large part to the advance of economic freedom. Unfortunately, indications are evident that this progress is now reversing to the great detriment of the world, as often reported in this newsletter, but that is an argument for another time.

The Heritage Foundation, Washington's No. 1 think tank recently published its latest 2023 survey that measures the principles of economic freedom that fuels said progress.

The Index covers 12 freedoms – from property rights to financial freedom – in 184 countries.

These 12 freedoms are grouped into four broad categories, or pillars, of economic freedom:

- Rule of Law (property rights, government integrity, judicial effectiveness)
- Government Size (government spending, tax burden, fiscal health)
- Regulatory Efficiency (business freedom, labor freedom, monetary freedom)
- Open Markets (trade freedom, investment freedom, financial freedom)

Each of the twelve economic freedoms within these categories is graded on a scale of 0 to 100. A country's overall score is derived by averaging these twelve economic freedoms, with equal weight being given to each.

For a quick visual comparison of how each country and region compares with each other on these freedoms, I present colored maps of the world showing each country's ranking of these 12 freedoms. You will note, the US didn't do well in the government spending and fiscal health freedoms. I think you will find it informative.

Generally green is good and red is regretful. But keep in mind, this is published by the Heritage Foundation in Washington D.C. so there may be some political favoritism involved.

Why proponents don't condemn China pollution

End of Article

Why global warming proponents don't condemn China for pollution.

China is responsible for more than one quarter of the world's annual greenhouse gas emissions.

Just days before COP26's opening in Nov 2021, the country released a new plan to lower them, but critics said it contained little in the way of new "ambition." Rather, China restated a forecast that it will hit peak emissions by 2030 and reduce its "carbon intensity" AFTER THAT.

Coal, a mainstay of Chinese energy production, will remain dominant for decades to come, although the country will start phasing it out in 2025.

In a past keynote speech, Obama chided China's leadership, suggesting it all adds up to a lack of commitment to making COP26 a success.

It reflects "a dangerous lack of urgency," said Obama, singling out not only China but Russia as well.

But analysts who've followed China's slow transition from a fossil fuel behemoth to an emerging clean energy giant say the reality of China's commitment to hitting the goals laid out in the 2015 Paris climate accord — and updated at the COP26 conference — is more nuanced.

In December 2020, Xi told the United Nations General Assembly that China would get to carbon neutrality by 2060. But that's a full decade later than the net-zero target set by many Western nations.

This begs the question, why does the world give China a pass on global polluting when all other nations "seem" (and that's the operative word) to be intent on getting to zero carbon emission as soon as possible?

Why proponents don't condemn China pollution

Why do global warming proponents fail to criticize China for its polluting industries? This is the question I often get from colleagues of mine in business projects in America, Asia and the Mid-East.

To answer that question, here is what I believe is the best and most accurate answer. It appeared in the April 2023 edition of Quora and was written by Henry R. Greenfield, a former Senior Consultant, Global Digital Twin Technology at Integrated Facility Management.

I present it here for your reading consideration.

D. Miyoshi

Why aren't global warming proponents condemning China, who has far more emissions especially by coal fired industries?

By Henry R. Greenfield

Brilliant question and the answer is not one that anyone wants to hear.

China consumes, China manufactures, China ships it out China pollutes. It is all part of the deal folks and really if you have lived in China do you want this in your back yard again?

China has somewhere between 25–28% of the global industrial production, they make everything for everyone. Name a country and China is their largest trading partner. Doesn't matter, USA, Europe, Australia, Africa, UK, South America even India as well as the Middle East as Saudi is now their best friends.

Militarists, democracies, dictatorships, monarchies they all buy from China and they buy everything. If it isn't direct then it is China making it in Vietnam or some other country. If you want to sell your 'resources' take Australia and iron ore then you sell to China. You want to sell your coal, say from Montana or Wyoming it goes to China.

The Cuyahoga River near Cleveland burning, yes burning in the late 60's

Now we have transferred that to China.

This is South China and I lived in this and far worse, yes there are buildings in there somewhere.

Have you ever lived in a place where you have to wipe your kitchen counters every day and only get black grime from the air that you are breathing. So, you close your windows and put on your A/C and gut it out and justify it by saying, wow at least I am making money.

That is the real world folks, no one wants to challenge China because no one wants pollution back on their shores, they outsourced production and pollution to China and if they need another 100 coal fired plants so we can get our China stuff, well then, we will just have to put up with it.

Keep those containers coming.

Thanks China and by the way, be careful on that pollution but don't raise the price of all that fun stuff you make for us, we love it.

US Perceptions of China's Power

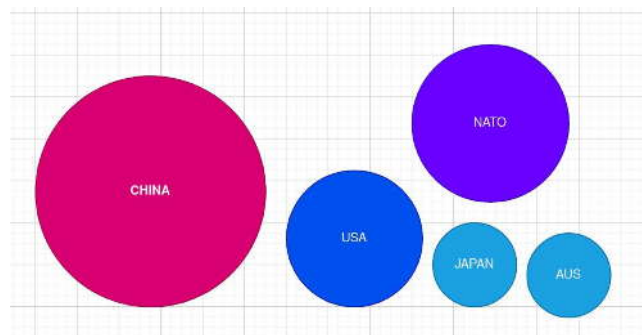

Here is an interesting article by Robert Vannrox of the Wumao Club that appeared in Quora in March 2023 that concisely lays out why the US Politicians and the Public's view of the power of China is different from that of the US military. I present it here for your reading consideration.

D. Miyoshi

Perception by US Politicians and the Public

- The Democrat party is historically the party of starting wars. This is the political party of President Biden.
- A sub-group has gained power and the levers of control within the United States called neocons have seized control of the American government. They serve the interests of the military-industrial complex.
- Everyone in the United States is influenced by American media, and a huge outlay in the billions of dollars has been devoted to changing public opinion against China. This is the Anti-China narrative.
- The American leaders, who are supposed to represent their constituents, serve them by reacting to their (now defined) hatred towards China.
- So, they argue for war preparations based on RAND studies. Leaving the details to be worked out by the Pentagon. So, what we have is this...

The American leadership see's China as a threat, and an enormous entity, but one that can be conquered. This is how they see a war in the South Pacific pan out...

They see China as large, but can be met with the combined forces of the "Allied" nations. And when they look at things from this perspective, they believe that they have an "edge". Meaning that they have an advantage.

That, coupled with a narrative of...

America is "exceptional" and protected by God.

America is the world; everyone else serves it. (The American ego.)

Hollywood images of Rambo, independence, and American military victories.

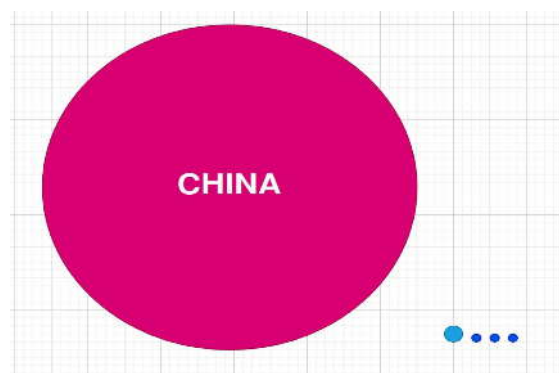

A total lack of history.

A censorship of reality outside of the USA.

Creates this illusion. It strengthens it. It makes it seem absolutely real; tangible and absolute. Who could not believe it?

But, the military at the Pentagon, see things as they actually are. They are the ones that have to deal with a war. And they see the war like this...

Perception by the US Military

Latest Theory on Covid Conspiracy

And because of this, there is a serious disconnect between perception by the American leaders, and reality as experienced by the American military. It's a "blow back" from the massive billions in dollars of anti-China propaganda funding.

And it is going to get people KILLED.

Latest Theory on Covid Conspiracy

Did the US Defense Dept contract with the Chinese Communist Party to deploy COVID vaccine against citizens?

The following is an article that appeared in Newstarget on Feb 23, 2023. It was written by Ethan Huff. If true, the article reveals the plot devised by the U.S. Department of Defense to conspire with the Chinese Communist Party to unleash Covid "vaccine" bioweapons on the citizens. The allegations in the article are detailed and plausible while the veracity of the claim has not been refuted by any news agency despite its presence in the news stream. What does that indicate? The implications of the article are chilling.

DoD conspired with communist China to unleash covid "vaccine" bioweapons on citizens

By Ethan Huff

Former pharmaceutical industry executive Sasha Latypova has come forward with damning information linking the Department of Defense (DoD) and Pfizer's Wuhan coronavirus (Covid-19) "vaccine" scheme to the Chinese Communist Party (CCP).

Sasha Latypova

Government documents obtained by Latypova show that the DoD partnered with a CCP-linked drug company to develop and distribute the "biological warfare agents marketed as 'Covid-19 vaccines'" from Pfizer and BioNTech.

"It is curious that the U.S. DoD awarded $10 billion ... to a venture whose substantial equity (and IP) holder is the Chinese Communist Party," Latypova wrote in a December 28 Substack article.

Over the past year, Latypova has dropped numerous bombshell revelations on the world pertaining to Wuhan coronavirus (Covid-19) "vaccines," all of which are a scam.

Government officials, Latypova claims, have been trying to conceal the relationship between Pfizer, the United States deep state, and communist China as it pertains to covid injections – but the cat is now out of the bag.

"I know what is in the redacted part," Latypova wrote about images she shared of heavily redacted text naming the third party that partnered with Pfizer and BioNTech for the “co-development and distribution” of a “coronavirus vaccine.”

Why Banks are Failing

“Fosun Pharmaceuticals ... it was not hard to figure out,” she revealed.

(Related: Three months before covid appeared, the DoD issued a “COVID-19 Research” contract to a Ukrainian company.)

It should really be called the Fosun-Pfizer-BioNTech covid “vaccine”

Another document dated March 16, 2020, substantiates Latypova’s claim that Fosun is the redacted third-party partner that worked with Pfizer, BioNTech, and the CCP to unleash covid shots under Operation Warp Speed.

This “strategic alliance,” that document states, was formed to ensure swift development and commercialization of the experimental gene-modification injections.

“Pfizer-BioNTech is really a 3-party R&D alliance: Fosun-Pfizer-BioNTech, and by ‘party’ I mean that one of the three is the Chinese Communist Party,” Latypova maintains.

“Fosun is a huge Chinese conglomerate that owns a large number of global companies, and its chairman, Guo Guangchang, is a very high ranking member of the CCP.”

According to Forbes, Guangchang is currently worth over $4 billion, and is a member of at least three different CCP-aligned organizations, including the 12th Chinese People’s Political Consultative Conference (CPPCC).

Under the supervision and direction of the CCP, the CPPCC provides consultation and advisory input to various CCP legislative bodies.

A native of the Soviet Union, Latypova has a unique and insightful perspective into the geopolitics of communist China, which is located right next to Russia.

“In China, every large employer, especially in something strategic like biopharma sector, is controlled by the CCP,” she says, adding that this was also the case in her homeland.

“... in the Soviet Union, where each workplace had a ‘partorg,’ a representative supervisor from the Communist party, or a whole department of them.”

There is also a fourth party involved in all this: Israel. The Israeli Ministry of Health was added to the “pharmacovigilance” agreement for data sharing on Jan. 6, 2021, the day of the so-called “insurrection” in the U.S. capital.

Latypova says this foursome agreed to “count the bodies and share the data with each other.”

Latypova also maintains that the DoD was directly in charge of the production and distribution of all covid injections unleashed by the Trump administration and its Operation Warp Speed scheme.

These so-called “vaccines” were never categorized by the DoD as medicines or pharmaceuticals, but rather as “COVID countermeasures” under the authority of the military. This is why Trump unleashed them as a military operation after declaring covid to be a health emergency of a pandemic nature.

Why are Banks Failing?

With the recent collapse of Silicon Valley Bank, Signature Bank, as well as other banks now in the process of failing as well, the obvious question arises, why are banks in trouble now? The apparent answer can be very simple. The banks have very little business coming in.

Why Banks are Failing

To elucidate on this situation, I provide below a recent newsletter article by Gregory Mannarino, a successful and noted financial consultant and author. I subscribe to Mannarino's newsletters and he encourages his subscribers to share them so that is what I will do here. I think you will find his newsletter informative.

FINANCIAL SYSTEM: And We All Fall Down.

By Gregory Mannarino

Once again! The global financial system finds itself in crisis. Indeed, a new full-on worldwide financial system/banking crisis is upon us. (And it's just getting started).

Let us consider...

Is it even remotely possible that banking regulators and central banks simply missed this? Meanwhile We the People saw this coming? Is that even possible? Really? How about no. There is absolutely no feasible or realistic way that banking regulators and central banks could have not seen this coming from miles away, and here are just a few reasons why.

Let's start with this. Every bank is required to submit financial reports to regulatory authorities every quarter and moreover, even without seeing these reports, it's plainly obvious that banks were failing because of just three things.

- Number 1. No deposits,
- Number 2. No loans, and
- Number 3. No deals.

I brought these three things listed above up to the attention of those who follow my work beginning no less than eight months ago.

Now, just to put this into further perspective. The average savings rate, which is calculated as the percentage of cash which people put away after expenses is 8.84%. Again 8.84% is the average. Well today, the savings rate has dropped to just 4.7% (and personally I believe that this number is inflated). This 4.7% savings rate appears inflated to me because currently more and more people are becoming dependent on credit card usage. (Credit card debt has exploded, rising 11% in just the last year).

With respect to "no loans and no deals." Year over year mortgage applications have dropped a record 43%, and bank refi's have dropped another record 74%. And on top of all this, loan delinquencies across the board continue to skyrocket.

But it gets even worse.

People are withdrawing cash from both their money market and savings accounts at a record pace.

So, no... It is not possible, even in the remote! That those who stand in charge of the world economy, the banking system, and the markets just missed all this. Therefore, it is deliberate. In fact, it's more than just deliberate!

This entire banking system crisis/global financial system collapse has been perfectly orchestrated and engineered by central planners/banks. But why?

The question of why comes down to just a few things. Central banks are "rearranging the deck chairs" so to speak, and it comes down to a consolidation of the banking system in preparation for the rollout of an entirely new central bank digital/cashless system.

It is also about a consolidation of power.

Understanding that even the Super Banks are also facing those same issues as the smaller regional banks, with "no deposits, no loans, and no deals." That situation, combined with rising loan delinquencies. Let's not forget the flight of cash from people who are being forced to deplete their savings and money market accounts just to make ends meet in this ongoing inflationary environment.

What better way could central planners use to re-liquify the large Wall Street Super Banks than to foster a meltdown of the smaller regional banks who will have no choice but to be forced into selling their assets to the mega banks at fire sale prices? Moreover, foster runs on the smaller banks with people closing their accounts only to open new ones in the more "secure" Super Banks. (With regard to the $30 billion dollar "rescue" for First Republic Bank, as it is being sold to the public via the mainstream media. This is no "rescue." This $30 billion is to cover withdrawals, as there is currently a run on that bank).

Who Will Be President in 2024

This is a deliberate culling of the smaller institutions to consolidate power and control into fewer mega institutions. It's a "rearranging of the deck chairs" in preparation for the rollout of a Central Bank Issued Digital Currency."

Let us remain mindful that for many months central banks have been "on a mission" to aggressively raise rates into what is a cratering global economy. Raising rates under the guise that "this is how they will stop inflation," which continues to rise. The truth is this. Central banks never, EVER, had any intention to slow, stop, or reverse inflation... because if they really wanted to stop, slow, or even reverse inflation, all they would have to actually do is contract the money supply by raising the capital reserve requirements of banks.

Central banks, by raising rates have deliberately caused the world economy to slow dramatically by crushing the consumer, and therefore set the stage for the current banking crisis.

Who Will Be President in 2024?

Joe Short, of New York Empire Stakes Sports Betting reports that although New York sports betting laws don't allow betting on the 2024 presidential election, immediately after Joe Biden was declared the winner over 45th President Donald Trump, the sports betting sites across Europe – where political betting is legal – began pricing up who would win the 2024 election.

Here are the 2024 Presidential Election Odds Updated to March 30:

They predict Four More Years For Biden

To add context to the odds of the next election, here are the implied probabilities along with each candidate's odds to become the next President of the United States.

March 30 update: The big guy is moving up again. President Joe Biden (33.3% chance of being elected, 2-to-1 odds) saw a bump, as did former President Donald Trump (28.6%, 5 to 2). Meanwhile, Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis (22.2%, 7 to 2) slipped back into third, where he has been most of the past couple of months. Vice President Kamala Harris (4.8%, 20 to 1) remained fourth, while former South Carolina Governor/UN Ambassador Nikki Haley (3.8%, 25 to 1) remained fifth.

To give you an even more detailed analysis of why Biden will win over Trump, here is a transcript of famed geopolitical analyst Peter Zeihan's YouTube video on who he believes the next president will be. I think you will find it informative.

D. Miyoshi

The Winner of the 2024 US Presidential Election Is...

by Peter Zeihan on April 3, 2023

Before I go on my overseas trip, now would be a good time to talk about American politics and tell you who's going to win the next presidential election. Now, the person to understand, if you want to see how this election is going to play out, is Bernie Sanders because I think most people in America agree that he's a big cuckoo and his ideas are crazy and if you sit down and actually force him to go for the math as some people have done, he will admit that the math doesn't make sense and he'll just raise taxes until it does. And if that raises the marginal tax rate to the point that it destroys everything, he has no problem with that. People who support Bernie Sanders, once you walk them through that, will come to the same general realization. But they will not change their minds because they are committed to the cause. Put another way, Bernie Sanders is not a political leader, he's a religious leader and he has a cult following as a result.

And so does Donald Trump. Now, what that means is somewhere between one quarter and one third of people who self-identify as

Who Will Be President in 2024

Republicans don't care what Trump does or what he says. I mean, hell he could live stream the abortion of his trans lover and they would still support him, which means that if only three other people run against him for the Republican nomination he's going to win. The way the Republican party works, when it comes to delegates is, in most of the races as long you get one more vote than whoever comes in second place, you walk away with every single delegate. So, it's really easy for someone to come in from the outside, just like Donald Trump did, because by most metrics he's not a conservative in the American sense and certainly not in the Republican sense. But, he was able to mobilize a group of people who'd been left to the outside of the populace and has catapulted into, not just to the presidency, but to control the Republican Party as a result.

So, in the environment that were in now, since we already have another three people declared for the presidency, it doesn't matter if someone like Florida Gov. DeSantis runs at this point. The vote is already sufficiently split that Donald Trump will walk away with the Republican nomination. That's pretty much hardwired in at this point. So, that's the Republicans.

Let's talk about the Democrats. The Democrats select their candidates a little bit differently. They don't have that winner take all mentality when it comes to the delegates, so if you get a number of strong candidates, they are going to break up the delegate count among them and it's going to semi-come down to the convention. At the convention there are a significant number of what they call superdelegates, which are people who were not representative of the primary of the caucus system but instead represent the party's institution which are primarily centrists. And the superdelegates came into play in the last presidential cycle, when for a brief, shining, terrifying moment it looked like Bernie Sanders might actually get the Democratic nominee. And since most centrists and center-left Democrats were like "ooh that would be disastrous by any number of manners" they all ratted together and used the party apparatus to make sure that Bernie did not get the nomination. And, as a result Biden was able to squeak through and then ultimately ran for president and ultimately gained the White House.

Now the centrists and the center-left within the Democratic coalition have made the decision already that they're not going through that again. And so, if Bernie or more likely when Bernie decides to once again run for president, the centrists will swing into action to make sure it's nipped in the bud as quickly as possible. In addition, the Democrats have always had a problem, I shouldn't say always, the Democrats in the last 25 years have had a problem that it's really hard for them to bring in fresh blood because you've got these charismatic people at the top who are politically and maybe even economically powerful who kind of suck all the oxygen out of the room and make it very difficult for young up and comers to make it into the system. Republicans don't have that particular problem. So, you get a lot of people who are in their 70s, people like Biden, people like Pelosi, people like Schumer who dominate the scene and there really isn't a cadre of people below them, there is no deep bench.

In that sort of environment, it's really, really hard to get a primary system that runs on actual competitive candidates. You just get these freaks that come in from the outside, freaks like Bernie Sanders. Well, since the centrists have already decided what they're going to do this time around that means Biden is a shoe in to get the nomination. Which puts us into a weird race. You get Republicans who are cult dedicated to Donald Trump and you got Democrats who are willing to shut out everyone else so long as Biden doesn't have a complete meltdown and start drooling effusively on stage. Barring those two extreme events, were talking about a redux of the last election of Biden versus Trump.

I don't think that any of the things that people are talking about right now as having an impact on the election would really matter at all. So, for example, the age issue. I mean yes, yes, yes, Biden is older than dirt by a wide margin and he would be the oldest president ever if he wins again. However, if Trump beats him Trump would then be the oldest president ever. So, the age issue is really a non-condition for any voter who says it is. It may be a compacting factor but since the runner up in this case has shown most of all it doesn't play.

And the same comes for replacing the vice presidency with somebody besides Kamala Harris. Has she risen to the occasion? No. Has she turned out to be good VP? Probably not by most measures. But replacing her isn't going to really change anyone's mind. Nobody votes for the vice president. So were left with Biden versus the Trump.

So, the question then is who walks away with that. From my point of view, it's pretty straightforward. Roughly 20 to 25% of the electorate is either hard-core Republican or hard-core Democrat and they may not like the candidate but they will hold their nose, pull the lever and vote for whoever their party's candidate is. They are locked in. There is no negotiating room there. Then you have another about 20% on each side that says they're independent, but like in 85% of races they vote for either Republican or Democrat so they're really only independent in name. Really, they're just subsidiaries of the left and the right in the American system. There's not a lot of wiggle room.

There there's only 10% of the American electorate that is truly independent and they are wishy-washy and they are judgmental and they get "buyer's remorse" and the votes of this last 10% is the primary reason why in midterms usually the party in power loses because they're having buyer's remorse. I know this very, very clearly because I am part of that 10%. We are never happy with what we are and were not part of the decision-making to determine what the candidates are and so we get handed this pallet that we just don't like, that we have to make do with and that usually manifests as us voting against whoever happens to be the guy in charge at the moment. So, that is how it normally runs. That's how it's always run. That's how it ran until we got to the 2022 midterms.

Because at the 2022 midterms almost exclusively the independents polled as not liking Joe Biden particularly on economic affairs. They saw his continued governance as being against their own economic best interests and yet they decisively sided with Democrats in all the races that really matter and so for the most part independents poll does not like the Biden administration's economic policies and they saw a continuation of those policies as against their own personal economic interests and yet they decisively voted against Republicans. Why? Well, it's not too hard to understand.

A lot of this talk about what's going on with the election system is real but you have to look at it from the independents point of view to really understand. If the Republican Party under Trump is able to change the electoral system in a way that they say they want to then swing voters don't matter anymore and independent voters don't have a party. That's the general election is the only way that they play in American democracy. And if you remove that, they are powerless. So, the United States government under Democrats and Republicans has this interesting saying when it comes to democracy in the Middle East. We want one person one vote but not just one time. And if we go down the path that Donald Trump wants to, you know that is compromised. That and Donald Trump has made personal loyalty the predominant issue in any political system in which he touches which brings us crap candidates like Oz or Walker who are very, very easy to vote against. And so, from the point of view of the independents, the people who have decided the last seven general elections, there's nothing to decide anymore. And so, it's pretty safe to say that if the midterms were decided by independents who usually don't even show up to midterms and they were willing to vote against what they see as their own economic best interests, you can bet your ass they're going to show up in the general election in two years and vote against Trump and everything he stands for. So, for that purpose primarily, I see this election as a shoe-in for Biden round two. All he has to do is not die and he's going to win.

Okay, now let's see why it matters. Now obviously if you're obsessed about who wins the US presidential election it matters independently. But beyond that it raises the possibility of the United States is going to have the first extended period of agreement in its foreign policy across administrations. Now let me explain that a little bit. Obama was infamous for never having conversations with anyone so for seven of his eight years as president, we basically had no foreign-policy at all. Then Donald Trump comes in and Donald Trump would tweet something bold and assume that that made it policy. But then nothing would ever be done with it because he couldn't be bothered to have a constructive conversation with anyone in the government or the bureaucracy or Congress. In fact, at one point he said that his tweets were notification to Congress of certain policies which clearly legally is not kosher. So, for his four years very little happened at the federal level. Biden has come in and Biden almost to a "T" shares Trump's approach to foreign economic policy making, extraordinarily populous, extraordinarily nationalist decisions. But the difference between the two is that Joe Biden actually believes in the power of government and can sit through a meeting in a way that Barack Obama could not and so he is actually going back through Donald Trump's tweets and turning them one after another into foreign economic policy and then embedding them into governments and into the American government bureaucracy. So, if you are a Biden supporter you should be furious because he's taking all of his cues from Trump. And if you are Trump supporter you should be furious because Biden is getting all of the credit for Trump's economic decision-making and policy statements. So, there's plenty in this video for everyone to get pissed off at. Now, if you disagree with my assessments on where this election is going, who we should blame for what, that's fine, that's fine. Why is Government so Inefficient?

Albert Einstein's definition of insanity—doing the same thing over and over and expecting different results—describes the behavior of U.S. policymakers. Whether the objective is to reduce inequality, slow climate change, or curb the market power of dominant firms, government policies simply have not worked. Nonetheless, urged on by policy advocates, elected officials adopt new policies and expect positive outcomes without knowing why previous policies have failed to accomplish their goals.

Political-economy theories of government stress the importance of organized special interests, including people in government, who distort policy formation and implementation or—the flip side—resist efficient policy changes. Although those theories are plausible, the causal evidence is weak, and the best conclusion that can be reached is that government suffers from status-quo bias because it fails to include essential reforms in the new policies it adopts. This implies that it is exceedingly difficult to indicate how, in practice, government can overcome its inefficiencies and improve its policies.

To illustrate this, there is a rather zany theory now circulating on the web that tries to explain why government is ultimately inefficient. I provide it here for your reading consideration only because the reason it sets forth makes some sense. Its title is "In Defense of Karen" Maybe you will also find it makes some sense.

In Defense of Karen

By Chris Campbell

Feb 22, 2023

"OK, KAREN."

Let's face it.

It's a bad decade to have been named Karen.

The name's been co-opted by the Interwebs to describe those — starting of course with white women, but has since branched out as an umbrella term — who complain, as Wikipedia put it, "beyond the scope of what is normal."

By the way, Wikipedia is quick to mention that this flavor of scorn is nothing new.

Before Karen there was Barbecue Becky. Before her, Cornerstone Caroline. And let's not forget Permit Patty. Our slang etymologists trace all of these derivatives back to the classic, but less alliterative, "Soccer Mom."

Karen has hit such a tender nerve that the once 3rd most popular name in America — peaking in 1965 — has fallen from grace.

Why is Government so Inefficient

Alberta reported last year that precisely zero Karens were born in 2022. And, according to the Social Security Administration, Karen dropped from 660th place in 2019 to 831st in 2020.

The reason's clear.

Nobody wants the slur cast in their direction.

Not just that.

These days, if you're unfortunate enough to catch a Karen, you also run the risk of inflaming the Internet's spontaneous, but always half-cocked, Anti-Karen League. Sometimes (though certainly not always) even if one's complaints come with reason.

A landlord asks her tenant to pay her rent on time?

"OK, KAREN."

Tired of that gaping pothole in the street?

"OK, KAREN."

Think your local schools are in shambles?

"OK, KAREN."

If you're wondering if this animosity is a symptom of a larger trend...

You're not alone.

One might point toward a thickened sense of complacency — learned helplessness, as it's called — about a fraying of the social, political, and economic fabric of America.

But then, an even bigger question arises: What's at the root of this unraveling?

If you ask Scott McKay at the Spectator, he'd say it's obvious.

Especially in our major cities.

He calls it...

Weaponized Governmental Failure

Many operate under the assumption that the majority of our political leaders are just... well... incompetent. (Although many put it in ways less polite.)

That's why things — even basic things — don't get done.

McKay argues the opposite. "The crime and the graft and the pot-holes and the bad drainage, not to mention the spotty trash collection or nonexistent snow shoveling, aren't incompetence. In fact, none of what you see in the American public sector is incompetence. The people responsible for it are quite highly educated and well-trained in their craft. You just need to understand what their craft is."

McKay defines Weaponized Governmental Failure (WGF) as the "deliberate refusal to perform the basic tasks of urban governance for a specific political purpose."

To do a bad job, he argues, is a choice. Especially when it comes to the basic amenities of a well-functioning city.

There are consequences to doing those things effectively: "If you do those things effectively, after all, what you will get is middle-class voters moving in."

And, therein lies the problem: "middle-class voters are a pain in the ass."

To Rule Over Ruin

Because they have more mobility, middle-class voters demand more bang for their buck from their taxes. They demand things like good roads, safe streets, functional drainage, decent schools, friendly business climates, etc.

Rich voters aren't usually as aggressive. They're not going to show up en masse and yell at the school board. They can afford private security, private schools, and gated communities.

When middle-class voters don't get what they want... they leave.

And, McKay points out, this isn't just about the so-called white flight: "Those suburbs the folks are leaving for?" McKays asks. "Their minority population share usually increases as their population does."

McKay's argument is this: The more middle-class voters you drive out of the city, the fewer "Karens" you have to deal with. Add to that, says McKay, "the more pliable the electorate becomes. A pliable electorate is one you can rule forever without successfully governing."

Therefore, he says, the craft of politicians isn't to govern effectively.

It's to rule.

"They rule over a ruin," says McKay, "but they rule."

The Thin Pink Line

If we revisit the original definition from Wikipedia, we see that a Karen is one who demands those things "beyond the scope of what is normal." If we are to believe McKay, the current progression in America is to normalize lower standards.

Profit by Finding an Edge

Perhaps McKay is onto something. But perhaps his argument is too simplistic.

The complaining “Karen” certainly isn’t the thin pink line between civilization and chaos...

But perhaps the meme is an early signpost of where we’re at: Increasingly, those with higher standards above “normal” shouldn’t always be comfortable expressing it. Lest you offend those who expect you to expect less.

Meanwhile, the Weaponized Governmental Failure continues...

Profit by Finding an Edge

In graduate business school we learned there are two perfect businesses. They are gambling and life insurance,

Why?

Because in both businesses, you can accurately assess the risk. Once you assess the risk, you can set your price accordingly and over the long run you will come out ahead.

Much of the information I present here is taken from an article by Tradesmith Daily, a financial consulting service I subscribe to that publishes investment and financial advisory services. Using their advice and programs has measurably reduce my financial risk in stock, bond, commodity and option investments.

Each year, the Nevada Gaming Control Board produces a report on the success of the casinos on the Las Vegas Strip.

We all know “the house always wins,” but this annual report — from the body that regulates Vegas casinos — tells us exactly how much. In 2019, tens of millions of people flocked to Las Vegas to play casino games like blackjack, poker, and roulette. The Nevada Gaming Control Board says those folks flew back home a collective $6.58 billion lighter in the wallet. That’s $6.58 billion Vegas separated from its previous owners — in just one year.

With giant revenue figures like that, it’s no wonder Vegas real estate is some of the most expensive on the planet. Land on the Strip can sell for more than $20 million per acre. Vegas casino operators regularly build gleaming megastructures for more than $1 billion a pop. The owners of these structures are some of the world’s richest people.

That long legacy of winning year after year... all those billions of dollars in revenue... all those megastructures... all those rivers of money...

...Trace their source to a phenomenon called “the house edge.”

The house edge is the reason why Las Vegas casinos make so much money with such regularity and such certainty.

The house edge is a simple mathematical concept. It’s the percentage of a player’s bet that the casino is likely to win. Said another way, it is the statistical advantage a casino holds in any given game.

You see, casinos don’t win year in and year out because they get lucky.

Casinos have an ocean-deep knowledge of probabilities. Nobody knows more about probabilities and payoffs than the people running casinos.

They use this knowledge to build an “edge” into every game they operate to ensure the odds are always stacked in their favor.

The “house edge” is typically small — so small that it’s nearly impossible for the average person to notice.

A casino might win a game just 51% of the time. (If a casino won every game, players wouldn’t play.)

Rather than rake in money through big, eye-popping wins, casinos apply their statistical edges over and over in small, almost unnoticeable ways, “winning small” thousands of times a day, millions of times per year. This helped U.S. casinos bring in a record-breaking $60.4 billion last year, according to the American Gaming Association.

The Rise of Demonism

All those small wins pile up to form a mountain of money.

This means the casino business is one of the only industries on the planet that has a business model based on mathematical certainty.

As long as they follow their own rules, casinos know they are 100% guaranteed to earn money because the odds are always in their favor.

Take the iconic Vegas game roulette.

There are 36 numbers on a roulette wheel plus a green zero. Depending on the country, there may also be a double zero, but we'll stick with just the one zero for simplicity.

When the roulette wheel is spinning, the ball can stop on any one of the 36 numbers or the zero. That's 37 possible stops.

This means the mathematical odds of a player picking one of those potential stops is 1 in 37.

Even though the roulette wheel offers 37 possible winning numbers, a player will receive a payout of 35 to 1 for a bet on a single number.

For winning a bet of 1 unit, the casino will pay the player 35 units plus the initial bet (36 units in total). For a straight-up bet, the probability of success is 1 out of 37, but the player will receive 36 units in the case of a win.

The difference of 1 unit (37 minus 36) is the house edge.

In this case, it's about 2.7%.

There's a very small chance that a player will win and the house has to pay them. But when the house does have to pay up, it pays 2.7% less than what the 1/37 odds would merit.

It's a small percentage, but applied over and over millions of times per year, it adds up.

You may not realize it, but playing casino games and investing in the financial markets are very similar.

It's no coincidence that many of the world's best investors and traders are avid poker players.

After all, success in both playing cards and playing the market is a matter of consistently stacking the odds in your favor, knowing how to balance risk and reward, and knowing when to play and when not to play.

The real secret to making a fortune on the Las Vegas Strip and on Wall Street is finding and applying AN EDGE... over and over again.

But note, nobody can predict the future with 100% accuracy. No software program can even do that. The only absolute certainty is that we can't predict the future with absolute certainty. As for markets, as in life, only a fool believes you can be right 100% of the time.

The purpose of this newsletter (as well as the Tradesmith Daily) is to provide you useful and hopefully interesting information that is not provided by mainstream sources. But it's not to tout any particular investment vehicle or project. That is for you to decide.

But just note, there are techniques and software programs such as those offered by established investment advisory services (of course for a price) that can measurably reduce the risk and thereby provide an edge.

And with an edge, over time, one will be able to generate a very reasonable and fair profit.

Here is to your successful investing.

The Rise of Demonism and its Dangers

The Rise of Demonism

Summoning demons has never been so fun! That blurb from A Children's Book of Demons is an apt description of the world we live in. Outright demonism is cool, trendy, even glamorous.

"After-school Satan clubs" are available at a handful of elementary schools. They even have a theme song: "Satan's not an evil guy, he wants you to learn and question why." Young witches post videos on how to get into paganism on TikTok. People with "multiple personalities" get likes for switching between different minds in front of the camera.

Two transgender men dominated world headlines by dressing as Satan for the Grammy Awards. One up-and-coming singer, also transgender, has the name of his favorite demon tattooed on his forehead. One rapper released a music video that showed him descending to hell and giving Satan a lap dance. It was previewed in a Super Bowl commercial—and followed up by "Satan Shoes"—a collaboration with Nike that allowed people to buy the trainers Satan was shown wearing, which contain actual human blood.

Movies and video games involving demonic themes have been around for years but are getting worse and worse—and more and more accepted.

And this begs the questionWhat are the dangers of Demonism?

To answer that I present an article by Richard Palmer that appeared in the April edition of the Philadelphia Trumpet. It provides a conservative Christian perspective on the threat Demonism brings today to our society.

As a Christian myself, I found it informative but disturbing. Even non-Christians may find this at the least a bit un-settling.

Are Demons Real?

Satan and demonism have become a part of our news cycle. The rise of all these demonic themes has led many to ask, Are demons real?

America's Christians are split on whether or not Satan exists. Polls generally put the split at around 50/50. That's not too surprising; American Christians are similarly split over whether or not God exists. One study reached the bizarre conclusion that more American Christians believe in Satan than in God.

What does the Bible say?

The Gospels record Jesus Christ regularly being confronted by and casting out demons (Matthew 4:24; 8:16; Mark 1:32, 34, 39; Luke 4:41). He delegated similar authority to His disciples (Matthew 10:8; Mark 3:15; 6:13; Mark 16:17; Luke 10:17). Demon-influenced people are encountered regularly in the book of Acts.

Some demons are violent and aggressive (Matthew 8:28; Mark 5:1-5; Luke 8:27-29). Others are annoying (Acts 16:16-18). Some people possessed with demons suffer seizures and loss of control (Matthew 17:14-16); some deliberately cut, mutilate or otherwise hurt themselves (Mark 5:5; Luke 9:42). They often make loud cries and screams (Luke 4:33-35). Some cause physical disabilities (Matthew 9:32-33; 12:22; Luke 11:14). Multiple demons can possess the same person (Luke 8:30; Mark 16:9).

If you believe the Bible is accurate in its record of the life of Jesus Christ, you have to believe that demons are real.

The Bible shows that these spirit beings have a profound influence on this world. Often that influence is invisible. But as it grows stronger, it is becoming plainer.

2 Corinthians 4:4 says Satan is "the god of this world." He subtly influences everyone in it (Ephesians 2:2). This has been the case throughout mankind's history—but the book of Revelation says things get much worse at the end of that history. Revelation 12:12 describes a time when Satan "knoweth that he hath but a short time."

Satan's time as god of this world is almost over. After a "war in heaven" (verse 7), which Satan lost, "the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him" (verse 9).

God warns, "... Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath ..." (verse 12).

"This verse tells us that Satan and the fallen angels—millions of demons—were driven out of heaven and cast down to Earth and are now confined here!" writes Trumpet editor in chief Gerald Flurry in his free book America Under Attack. "Never before has this world been so infested with demons. Look around: The evil proliferating in every direction has a source, and this prophecy exposes it.”

This is the spiritual reality behind the shocking news and modern trends.

It’s important to know that something does not have to look obviously evil to be evil. Satan can come as an angel of light (2 Corinthians 11:14). Something can appear wholesome, even appear as though it is from God, yet be from the devil.

But as society is driven further from God, there is less reason to hide or disguise the evil. This is why outright Satanism is now clearly on display.

Multiple Personalities

Perhaps the most naked display of demonism comes from the “multiplicity” movement. Vice described the concept in a May 2015 article “Are Multiple Personalities Always a Disorder?” with an introduction through the lens of Falah Liang, who had sensed the presence of a birdlike man in her mind since she was 5. This presence was joined by others as she grew older.

Vice writes: “A ‘multiplicity system’ refers to the group within the body itself (i.e. ‘I’m part of a multiplicity system’). The system might consist of two people, or it might consist of 200. ... The multiplicity community insists on being seen as healthy—even normal. This is our reality, they argue. Why are you imposing your reality onto us? Dissociative Identity Disorder (did)—and its controversial precursor, Multiple Personality Disorder—are terms roundly rejected by the community, and most of them don’t feel that they belong in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual (dsm) at all.”

“With did, it’s more like a person’s body is a boardinghouse filled with many guests, and you’re not quite sure who will come to the door when you knock,” states a March 2019 Vice article.

Some of these “multiplicity systems” are so large they think of themselves as a city rather than a person. Others push for more “rights” for other “multiplicity systems” through groups like “Plural Activism.”

Those who embrace did so strongly are rare, but the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders published by the American Psychiatric Association in 2013 estimates that 1.5 percent of Americans experience it each year. Other estimates say that between 0.01 and 1 percent of the population are affected.

Some have gone on to create a following for themselves on TikTok or YouTube. The most prominent has over 1 million followers. The hashtag #DiD—which will bring up videos of people openly influenced by demons—has 2.5 billion views. One video of a “system” switching between personalities, and the follow-up discussion, got 100 million views. “I get so many comments from people saying, ‘Why does everyone have did all of a sudden?’” said one “host” of “a did system of 12.”

Since did became a TikTok phenomenon, “all of a sudden, all of my adolescent patients think that they have this,” psychologist Naomi Torres-Mackie told Teen Vogue last year.

The TikTok videos make these multiple personalities seem cool and glamorous. The reality, as Teen Vogue admits, is “truly scary”—ranging from amnesia to fits and seizures. Over 70 percent of outpatients being treated for did have attempted suicide.

Letting in a bunch of demons makes a person very miserable.

Witchcraft and Paganism

The Bible links witchcraft, wizardry and the occult with demonism. Some modern witches would make this connection themselves; others consider themselves the worshippers of nature.

When God commanded ancient Israel to avoid those who get into magic and the occult, He also warned against those who “have familiar spirits” (Leviticus 19:31; 20:6)—who talk to demons. In the most detailed example of witchcraft, the witch of Endor in 1 Samuel 28, King Saul went to a woman who had a “familiar spirit.” This woman claimed to be putting Saul in contact with the dead Prophet Samuel (verses 11-15). The Bible establishes that the dead do not know anything (Ecclesiastes 9:5, 10). He could not have been talking to Samuel: Instead, a demon was impersonating him.

In the New Testament, the Apostle Paul stated that pagan religions directly worship devils (1 Corinthians 10:20).

Modern witchcraft, Wicca and neo-paganism are all forms of demon worship. And they are on the rise.

The Rise of Demonism

Early surveys estimated that in 1990 about 8,000 Americans identified themselves as Wiccans—a form of witchcraft. The 2014 Pew Religious Landscape Study estimated that 1 to 1.5 million were Wiccan or pagan. That's around the same number as attend the Presbyterian church (1.4 million). Even this may undercount. Wicca is quickly becoming yesterday's movement; modern witches are more likely to call themselves "eclectic witches," picking and choosing for themselves what crafts they practice.

Pagan beliefs are even more common. More than 60 percent of U.S. adults hold at least one of the following "new age" spiritualist beliefs:

- that spiritual energy can be located in physical things
- in psychics
- in reincarnation
- in astrology

The "psychic services industry," which "includes astrology, aura reading, mediumship, tarot-card reading, palmistry, among other metaphysical services," is estimated to be worth over $2 billion annually. Celebrities like the singer Adele have said they use healing crystals. Witchcraft accessories like Tarot cards or supposedly magical symbols can be bought in mainstream stores.

Modern witchcraft, Wicca and neo-paganism are all forms of demon worship. And they are on the rise.

Even practices as obviously occult as using mediums are becoming mainstream. Prince Harry said he contacted a medium to try to contact his dead mother. He is not alone—1 in 5 Americans say they have contacted a psychic or medium. About the same proportion believe that mediums have the ability to contact the dead.

But this movement is also receiving a glamorous online following. "WitchTok" has become a major phenomenon on the TikTok video-sharing platform. Videos with tags like #WitchTok have amassed 30 billion views. That's more than tags such as #Biden (8.5 billion) and equal with #Kardashians. Other tags like #babywitch—helping people get into witchcraft—have picked up hundreds of millions.

The Transgender Movement

Perhaps the most blatant evidence of demonism is seen in the rapidly rising transgender movement.

In 1 Timothy 4:1-3 Paul warns of many departing from the faith, listening to "doctrines of devils [demons]." What are these doctrines? Included in his list is "forbidding to marry."

The Bible reveals that demons are fallen angels. They left their first estate (Jude 6) and rebelled against God. In some passages, demons are referred to as the devil's angels (Matthew 25:41; Revelation 12:9). Like the righteous angels, the demons are sexless and genderless (Matthew 22:30; Mark 12:25).

As Herbert W. Armstrong explained in his book The Missing Dimension in Sex (request your free copy), God created marriage and family for human beings for a profound purpose—to teach us wonderful truths about our potential to be born as sons of God. The demons have neither this potential nor the ability to reproduce themselves, and so they hate it.

For centuries they have influenced religions to believe that sex is shameful, that being single is better than being married, and that priests should be celibate—none of which is taught in the Bible. Now this hatred is manifested more clearly than ever, with people mutilating their own bodies and taking on "gender neutral" pronouns—imitating the genderless demons.

One in four LGBT youth use gender-neutral pronouns. This movement is even inventing new pronouns. One of the most popular is "fae, faer, faeself." Fae is essentially a pagan word for a demon or spirit. These transgender people want others to refer to them as demons. In fact, pagans are even complaining about the LGBT movement appropriating their word.

Even more closely related to demons is the "two spirit" movement. Billed as a native American version of the LGBT movement, they believe that having two spirits in them is the cause of their homosexual or transgender behavior. The two-spirit movement now has its own flag and is taught in schools in California and Canada.

More extreme still is the otherkin or fictionkin movements, where people identify as animals or fictitious creatures, like dragons, vampires or elves. The Bible shows that many angels—and therefore demons—look like animals (Ezekiel 1:10). Satan himself is described as a dragon. Some will even get extreme tattoos or piercings to look more like the animal they believe they are. Some will even call themselves "demonkin"—identifying as demons.

LGBT individuals, especially transgender ones, are heavily represented in other open manifestations of demonism. Those with multiple personalities are often transgender. A scroll through #WitchTok videos shows they are overwhelmingly from the "LGBT community." A 2015 Pew survey found that LGBT people were twice as likely to have a non-Christian religion—including paganism and Wicca.

Gateways to Demonism

There is a spiritual reality behind the rise of demonism. But there are other, direct causes. Certain behaviors open up the mind to demons, and these are on rise.

"Under normal circumstances ..., no one need fear a demon may take possession” of their minds, wrote Mr. Armstrong. Generally it can only happen if “you open your mind by letting it be blank, or under control of another, or you lose your mind in an emotional angry rage” (Worldwide News, December 1980).

Certain religious rituals are designed to let the mind go blank and allow a demon to take control. But far more common today are mind-altering drugs that break down the mind’s defenses and can allow in demons. In 2021, over 100,000 people died of drug overdoses in the United States. The 2017 National Survey on Drug Use and Health estimated that 20 million Americans age 12 and over had a substance disorder. There have been some well-publicized examples of addicts having their whole personality change—and they have gone on to violently attack others. One such individual videoed himself attacking and then eating his homosexual partner. “There is such things as monsters, demons and ghosts,” he wrote on his Facebook page. “They live inside of us, and sometimes they win.”

Dabbling in the occult is another way to invite in demons. God admonishes us to “have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them” (Ephesians 5:11). Today, it’s mass entertainment. Harry Potter opened the mainstream floodgates. Half of Americans ages 18 to 34 have read at least one of these books; 61 percent of Americans have watched one of the movies. Books and movies about zombies, werewolves, vampires and witches are common.

Video games can also prove a potent gateway—they are highly addictive and often coupled with violent or demonic themes.

The Bible reveals that music has a powerful connection to the spirit world. Uplifting music from David could cause demons to leave (1 Samuel 16:14-18). On the other hand, the Bible says Lucifer was created with musical pipes—innate musical ability (Ezekiel 28:13).

He is the real author of depraved music, and an evil musical environment can open up one to demonic influence (article, page 7).

Pornography and perverted sex can be another gateway, with the demons’ hatred of godly principles of marriage and family (article, page 35).

1 Timothy 4:3 also labels vegetarianism—forbidding to eat the meats that God has proclaimed fit for human consumption—as a “doctrine of [demons].” Is it a coincidence that vegetarianism—or a reduced meat “flexitarian” diet—is being pushed by the elites of this world? Physical health can affect mental attitude. Pushing people into unhealthy diets and lifestyles can make them more open to evil influences.

We need to protect our minds, and the minds of our children, from these kinds of influences. Instead, they are given free rein.

Certain behaviors open up the mind to demons, and these are on rise.

Isaiah 57:5 gives God’s verdict on our society today: “Inflaming yourselves with gods under every green tree, Slaying the children in the valleys, Under the clefts of the rocks?” (New King James Version). Today, lust draws many people into the worship of false gods and demons.

“Anciently the Israelites sometimes physically sacrificed their own children,” writes Mr. Flurry in Isaiah’s End-Time Vision. “Today we sacrifice our youth spiritually when we give them no uplifting vision. We sacrifice them to sexual lust and fornication. The Internet alone does $10 billion to $13 billion worth of business in pornography every year just in America! It is the most profitable online business. We also sacrifice our children to demoniacal music, drugs and greed. In the nations of Israel, this is done even before our youth are taught to use their minds!” Sadly, these trends have reached such extremes that today, some children have become possessed.

A God More Powerful Than Demons

While we should not go anywhere near demons or demonic influences, we have no need to fear demons. Throughout the Bible, God reveals Himself as vastly more powerful than Satan and the fallen angels. Demons had to obey God’s ministers, and Christ “beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven” (Luke 10:17-18). The demons tremble with fear before God’s power (James 2:19).

So powerful is God that He can use Satan for His own ends. In the book of Job, God allowed Satan to bring great suffering on Job. But it was to help Job overcome and grow—and the book ends with God blessing Job more than ever before.

God is allowing the demonic attack today. But though the demons are in total rebellion against Him, it is all to His glory. It will lead to mankind learning the horrible consequences of rebelling against God.

Who are Happy People?

To answer this important question, here is short blurb by Neal Freyman that recently appeared in The Wall Street Journal.

D. Miyoshi

What do very happy people have in common? The Wall Street Journal followed up with the 12% of respondents in a WSJ-NORC survey who called themselves “very happy” and asked them what they were all about. Here are the traits they share.

- Companionship: 67% of the happiest people said that marriage was very important to them, compared to 43% of overall respondents.
- Religion: Two-thirds of very happy people characterized themselves as moderately or very religious. The overall share: less than half.
- Closer to death: People 60 and over accounted for 44% of the happiest group, but represented 30% of total survey respondents.
- Gym rats: Fitness was a common interest among very happy people.

What doesn't seem to matter to being very happy? Political party affiliation or avoiding following politics.

The Puppet Master

If you suspected Joe Biden isn't really the one running the U.S. government, you may be right.

We all suspect Biden is really controlled by a “puppet master” or even a cabal of puppet masters. I originally thought it was Barak Obama and I could cite many events that happened to support that suspicion.

But recently I came across an intriguing report that challenged my belief. This report arguably reveals the person who actually is controlling Joe Biden as well as most of the potentates who control the major financial and industrial institutions and organizations in the western world.

This report appeared on Moneyball Economics on April 17, 2023 and is written by Andrew Zatlin, who is cited in the report as Bloomberg's #1 ranked economist. But I leave that ranking to your own appraisal and opinion.

The report is lengthy and a bit self-serving so I abridged its contents to enable me to better see the author's major points of contention. Essentially, the author attempts to answer the questions, who actually controls Biden and is the climate change movement really legitimate?

So, I present an abridged version (which, I apologize is still a bit lengthy) for your reading consideration. Zatlin's ideas are compelling and gives us caution concerning what we should do to protect ourselves in the coming new world order and the tormenting programs this puppet master and his cronies are scheming to institute against the people.

I hope you find this report informative as I did.

D. Miyoshi

The Puppet Master

Have you ever suspected that Joe Biden's not really running America?

Have you wondered who's really pulling the strings behind the scenes?

Let me show you...

I want you to take a close look at this man behind President Joe Biden...

He's been called "the most dangerous man in the world"...

"The new Karl Marx"...And even "the Antichrist"... But I call him Joe Biden's Puppet Master...

Because despite him never being elected to hold office and never being put up for a vote among "We the People..." I believe he's the man who's pulling all the strings... And directing all of Biden's policies that are destroying America.

Every independent-thinking American deserves to know what this man is really up to...Because the next phase of his plan could take away your God-given freedoms and constitutional rights...Give the government complete control over your money...And completely destroy your way of life...

And no, I'm not talking about Barack Obama, Bernie Sanders, George Soros, Bill Gates, or anyone you've likely heard of before...

This man has never been on a ballot. He holds no official title. He's not part of any government committee, council, or cabinet. Instead, he's a Harvard-educated descendant of a Nazi family who operates behind the scenes. And you won't hear much about him from the corrupt mainstream media.

Operating In The Shadows

He's the head of what many believe is the #1 anti-American organization in the world. He leads a small group of wealthy and powerful individuals who operate beyond national borders... Deciding policies they want to see applied on a global level...Policies that could enrich them and give them complete control over your life. In fact, he's connected to the world's most powerful men, including...

Bill Gates...

The Clinton family. Both Bill...

And Hillary...

The leader of the Chinese communist party, Xi Jinping...

And the head of the European Central Bank, Christine Lagarde, just to name a few...

The Puppet Master

He's also connected to some of the most powerful billionaires in the world, such as...Facebook's founder Mark Zuckerberg...Amazon's founder and owner of the Washington Post Jeff Bezos...And George Soros, who's Hillary Clinton's most generous billionaire donor...

Biden's Puppet Master is connected to the heads of Big Pharma.. Like the CEOs of the two big vaccine manufacturers Pfizer and Moderna...He's connected to the heads of major banking institutions, like the CEOs of Mastercard and Bank of America...And he's connected to the big players on Wall Street, like the CEO of Goldman Sachs...And the CEO of the world's largest asset manager BlackRock, Larry Fink...

I'm talking about the masters of the universe who have the power to destroy your way of life.

As dangerous as this is so far, it gets even worse... Because this man's most important connection by far is President Joe Biden.

Today, through this very controversial letter...I'm going to prove to you how Biden and his Puppet Master will use a made-up climate crisis to give the global elite complete control of how you spend your money.

Very soon, they will get to decide what kind of car you're allowed to drive...What kind of food you're allowed to eat... What kind of books you're allowed to read...What you're able to put into your own body...What type of weapons you can and can't buy to protect your home...What kind of education your kids and grandkids are allowed to get...What kind of movies you're allowed to watch... And even how warm or cool you can keep your own home's thermostat...

And I believe they're about to pull the trigger on the last phase of their evil plan.

In fact, Reuters just broke the news that they're launching a pilot program to give them control over your money.

Once they flip the switch...I believe you could lose access to your bank account, your credit card, and even your social security benefits.

I know this all sounds like a crazy conspiracy theory. But before you think I'm just some nut job wearing a tinfoil hat...You should know Bloomberg has ranked me as one of the top economists in America.

The Wall Street Journal even wrote an entire article about me, saying that my predictions were, and I quote, "knocking it out of the park."

Biden said in order to achieve his agenda...

"No extreme scenario can now be taken off the table."

The Puppet Master's "Extreme Measures"

#1 New York Times bestselling author and renowned radio host Glenn Beck says:

The Puppet Master

"President Biden may present himself as a Scranton-born, champion of blue-collar America, but he and numerous members of his administration are as devoted to [this plan] as anyone has ever been. If [they] achieve even half of what they're setting out to accomplish, the US will never be the same."

— Glenn Beck

America Can't Be That Corrupt... Right? Wrong.

If you wanted to intentionally destroy America, would you do anything differently than what President Biden is doing?

Think about it...

Instead of unleashing our very own domestic oil and gas production to ease pain at the pump for Americans...He has declared war on fossil fuels, all while draining our strategic oil reserve and begging dictators in Venezuela and Saudi Arabia for oil. He's devaluing the dollar at the fastest pace in 40 years...To a point where inflation is now forcing many families to choose between putting gas in their car or food on the table. 401ks are getting wiped out... And mortgage rates are the highest in more than 20 years, putting home ownership out of reach for millions of Americans.

He has opened the borders to about 5 million illegal immigrants...Including potential criminals, terrorists, welfare recipients, and enemies of the United States. He's also shrinking our Air Force, Navy, and Army... And turning our military into a bunch of woke wimps, all while driving us towards a potential war with another nuclear power.

He's dividing the country by calling all of 75 million Americans who didn't vote for him "domestic terrorists"... And he's using race and gender to play us against each other. He's dumbing down and indoctrinating our children with anti-American propaganda in the schools and media. And he's emptying prisons and letting real criminals onto the streets...

All while persecuting Americans who he considers to be his political opponents.

In fact, Joe Biden's Puppet Master himself predicted that, and I quote...

By 2030 "The U.S. will NOT be the world's leading superpower."

And he's manipulating his puppet, President Biden, to make sure that prediction comes true.

WSJ: "Knocking it Out of The Park"

My name, by the way, is Andrew Zatlin.

I live in North Carolina with my wife and two kids. I've been a trained economist for more than 30 years... But I'm not just one of those academics who sits behind a desk writing boring papers all day, like most economists do. I spent two decades working in Silicon Valley...Where I held senior roles in Business Strategy and Operations at NEC Electronics and Cisco.

That real-life experience gave me unique insights on how economies actually work and set me apart from other mainstream economists. That's why I was ranked #1 for Jobs Forecasting by Bloomberg... Ahead of analysts at major Wall Street firms like JP Morgan and Bank of America.

Today, I run an independent investment research firm called MoneyBall Economics.

By independent, I mean that I don't accept any advertisements from funds, companies, or think tanks. And that means I can't be compromised by money...And I can speak the truth without worry of being "canceled" by anyone.

My research has been used by several of the world's top hedge funds that manage an excess of a combined $20 billion.

I say this not to brag... But to show you that my predictions are based on what's actually happening in the economy. It's why Business Insider wrote that my work is based on "highly accurate, data-driven methods."

The bottom line is...

My predictions are based on facts... And the facts here are crystal clear.

With his Puppet Master pulling the strings...Joe Biden is planning to use a bogus global warming crisis to implement the most radical change in America's history.

Let me show you how it's all playing out...

Penetrating Governments Around The World

The first thing you should know is that this man runs a 3-year indoctrination program for global leaders...And he trains these future politicians to execute his plans.

Just listen to his own words. He said:

The Puppet Master

"I have to say, when I mention names, like Mrs. Merkel and even Vladimir Putin, and so on, they all have been [part of the program]. But what we are very proud of now is the young generation, like Prime Minister [Justin] Trudeau, the President of Argentina and so on.

We penetrate the cabinets. So yesterday I was at a reception for Prime Minister Trudeau and I know that half of his cabinet, or even more than half of his cabinet, are actually [part of the program]. It's true in Argentina and it's true in France, with the President."

— Biden's Puppet Master

That's how we end up with a lot of global leaders who follow similar policies that only benefit the global elite.

And please, don't dismiss this message as me just being a shill for the Republican party. I'm not.

Fact is, Biden's Puppet Master has buried himself deep inside the Republican establishment as well... He's influencing the right-leaning Governor of Maryland... The mayor of Miami... and multiple Republican Congressman from Pennsylvania, Mississippi, and, of course, California.

Several members of Joe Biden's administration also went through his indoctrination program... Including the Secretary of Transportation Pete Buttigieg and the Director of the National Economic Council Brian Deese.

As Biden's Puppet Master likes to say...

"It's all about putting the right people at the right place"

— Biden's Puppet Master

And he couldn't have found a better puppet than Joe Biden.

He's a lifelong politician. And it's proven that he'll read almost anything put in front of him on a teleprompter. Add in the fact that he's mentally impaired... And it makes him the perfect empty shell that the elites can use to implement their evil plan.

In fact, these "global elites" have so little regard for us that they aren't even trying to hide the plans.

They think so little of us that they aren't bothering to disguise their intentions.

It's right in front of our faces.

Directly From The Desk Of The Puppet Master Right To Biden's Teleprompter

For example, look at Joe Biden's slogan, "Build back better."

Do you think Joe Biden's campaign came up with that? No, they didn't. Biden and his team had more than a little help from his Puppet Master. Fact is, back in 2019, before Joe Biden's presidential campaign started... Biden's Puppet Master was already using that phrase to indoctrinate several global leaders.

In that year's official annual report from his organization, he wrote:

"Now the business of business is to build back better"

— Biden's Puppet Master

In mid-2020, his organization also published a paper saying...

"To build back better, we must reinvent capitalism"

— Biden's Puppet Master

A week later, Joe Biden published his economic plan on his campaign page... "Build Back Better."

That's how that became the official slogan of his campaign.

It's clear the slogan came right from the lips of Biden's Puppet Master... directly to Biden's campaign site itself.

That's called power and influence.

Still think this is all a big coincidence?

Shortly after Biden's election, someone asked John Kerry, the "climate czar," if Biden would help this man implement his evil plan.

Listen to what he said:

"It will happen with greater speed and with greater intensity than a lot of people might imagine."

— John Kerry

The Puppet Master

This is coming directly from the same John Kerry who's met multiple times with Biden's Puppet Master.

And what they're planning is no small feat.

They just launched a pilot program that will ultimately give them the power to lock you out of the financial system, including your own bank account...

Without having to pass any new law by government dictate.

Now, these people may be evil...But they're not dumb.

They know that such a radical plan is massive...And for them to be able to pull this off, they need to have a big crisis.

Like Obama's former chief of staff Rahm Emmanuel once said:

"You never want a serious crisis to go to waste. It's an opportunity to do things that you think you could not do before."

— Rahm Emmanuel

So when the COVID-19 pandemic hit the world in 2020...It gave them the perfect opportunity to implement their plan and expand their control. Again, if you think that I'm just making this stuff up...

Just listen to what Biden's Puppet Master said in mid-2020. He said that all the lockdowns and mandates across the globe...

"Proved that a reset of our economic and social foundations is possible. Now is our best chance to achieve it. Incremental measures and ad hoc fixes will not suffice. We must build entirely new foundations for our economic and social systems."

— Biden's Puppet Master

So he clearly admitted they were planning to use the pandemic to implement their plan.

But it didn't work because the pandemic was temporary.

To achieve their goal of completely changing every aspect of society and taking control of your money... They need a more dangerous crisis to "solve"... One that's permanent and not going to go away anytime soon... And one that could supposedly destroy all human life on earth.

Does anything come to mind?

Can you think of anything you've heard from Biden and the corrupt mainstream media lately?

The Government Never Lets a Good Crisis Go To Waste... Even If They Have To Make The Crisis Up

Yes, I'm talking about climate change.

They're doing everything they can to convince you that global warming is an imminent and existential crisis.

That's why Biden's Puppet Master started a propaganda campaign to promote the idea that climate change will be much worse than any pandemic.

He said:

"We only have one planet and we know that climate change could be the next global disaster with even more dramatic consequences for humankind. We have to decarbonize the economy in the short window still remaining."

— Biden's Puppet Master

Shortly after, Joe Biden, playing his part as the perfect puppet, said this:

"Climate change poses an existential threat to our lives, to our economy. The threat is here. It's not going to get any better. This is code red. The nation and the world are in peril. That's not hyperbole. That is a fact."

— Joe Biden

The only problem is that this is just another one of Joe Biden's countless blunders...Just like when he said inflation would be transitory... or the border is secure... or that "our economy is strong as hell." The idea that the human race is about to be extinct because of climate change is, as Joe Biden likes to say, malarkey.

The Puppet Master

And that's not just me saying it...

Check out this headline...

He says there's no climate emergency. This isn't coming from a nut job. It's coming from the founder of the world's largest environmental activist organization... It's coming from a man regarded as one of the world's most qualified experts on the environment. When asked why he left Greenpeace, he said:

And, again, I don't want you to take my word for it because I'm not a climate scientist. Instead, I want you to listen to the one scientist who literally wrote the book on it... A book called Unsettled: What Climate Science Tells Us, What It Doesn't, and Why It Matters.

His name is Steve Koonin. And he's not just some crazy conspiracy theorist. He has an MIT doctorate in physics. And he's the former chief scientist for BP and former Undersecretary for Science at the U.S. Department of Energy.

After analyzing all the available science, he called all this climate alarmism "hubris."

Yes, it's true that the globe is warming modestly. But it has been warming since about the year 1700. For context, that was 150 years before we were using fossil fuels.

And yes, it's true that humans are having some type of influence. But the why and how aren't as clear as they want you to believe.

And the idea that we're all going to die is complete BS.

Listen to his conclusion:

"Very few people, and that includes journalists who report on climate news, read the actual science. I have.

And what the data—the hard science—says is that... things are NOT that bad Heat waves in the US are NO MORE COMMON than they were in 1900. Hurricane activity is NO DIFFERENT that it was a century ago. Floods have NOT increased across the globe over more than seventy years. Greenland's ice sheet is NOT shrinking any more rapidly today than it was 80 years ago.

And the temperature extremes in the U.S. have become LESS COMMON and somewhat Milder since the late nineteenth century.

Does that sound to you like we're really facing the end of the world?

Unfortunately, most people don't know the truth because Biden's Puppet Master and his associates have corrupted scientists... And they've launched a censorship campaign to bury the truth. Anyone who goes against their narrative is immediately labeled as a "climate denier."

Facebook even suppressed a Wall Street Journal review of the book I just mentioned, Unsettled. "The New York Times and the Washington Post never even reviewed the book.

Working with the corrupt mainstream media... Biden's Puppet Master and his "elites" have also launched a very successful propaganda campaign to scare the bejesus out of everyone. It's a fear-mongering campaign designed to give them the perfect excuse to implement their evil plan...

And take control of your money and your life. Again, that's not just me saying it.

For example, the Associated Press confessed that last year they received $8 million just to promote claims of global warming.

That's why you see headlines like this one from The Guardian...

The Puppet Master

"The climate disaster is here."

— The Guardian

Or this one from CNN, claiming that we only have until 2030 to save the world...

They've even turned daily weather forecasts into a propaganda machine.

Take a look at this example...

If you look at the temperatures and compare them to 10 years ago, they actually went DOWN. But in order to create the illusion that we're all going to burn to death soon, they're now showing the entire map covered in red.

Unfortunately, all this propaganda is working.

Using Fear To Control The Population

More than half of the U.S. population now believes that it is likely that entire cities will be lost to rising sea levels. If that's true, why did Obama buy a $15 million oceanfront mega-mansion in Martha's Vineyard? If he were really concerned about rising sea levels, wouldn't he avoid all oceanfront property for fear of death and destruction? My guess is that Obama knows it's all a made-up crisis.

What's even more insane is that just over one-third of Americans believe climate change will lead to Earth becoming uninhabitable for all life. In other words, one-third of Americans believe we're all going to die because of global warming.

The reality is that this climate hysteria has been going on for decades...

In the 1970s, they predicted that today we would be facing, and I quote, "a disastrous new ice age."

That's right. Instead of global warming, they were predicting we were all going to freeze to death in a global cooling.

It didn't happen.

In the 1980s, they said "entire nations could be wiped off of the face of the earth by rising sea levels by 2000."

It didn't happen.

In 2008, former presidential candidate Al Gore, who you see here with Biden's Puppet Master, predicted the North Polar Ice Cap would be completely ice free in five years.

John Kerry, who flies around the world in his private jet polluting the earth more than you and I ever will, made the same prediction.

But it's been 15 years since Gore made the claim. Far as I can see, the Polar Ice Cap is still just that – an ice cap. And snow cover across the Northern Hemisphere actually just reached the highest level since measurements began in 1967.

Or look at the new monarch of Britain, King Charles III, who you see here meeting with Biden's Puppet Master.

The Puppet Master

In 2009, he said we only had about 8 years to save the world. 14 years later, we're all still here.

An Unblemished Track Record of Being Dead Wrong

For more than 50 years, these climate alarmists have been predicting that some terrible environmental catastrophe was imminent.

I found 51 predictions in total. And they have a perfect record of getting all 51 predictions wrong...

None of their predictions came true. Not even once.

Now let me be clear – it's fair and right to be concerned about the environment overall. But the climate change talk is all about whipping up hysteria.

Fact is, they'll create extreme positions and outcomes... and tell us the world is likely to end unless we take action. Extreme action. And that's the point, isn't it? They want us to take their action. They want us to swallow their solutions.

And the question we must ask is – for what end?

Facing certain gloom, they tell us the only way to solve this crisis is to give them absolute power and control.

And that's their endgame – power and control.

The bad news is...

According to consulting firm KPMG, 96% of the 250 largest companies in the world are already behind this green energy nonsense.

Why?

One word...

Money.

Think about it...

A transition to green energy would demand trillions and trillions of dollars... Huge new public work policy... and massive government funding. If you want a crisis that guarantees governments gain more power... And that allows them to steal more of your money for their plans, funneled into their investments and their family and friends... This false climate crisis is it.

Again, that's not just me saying it.

John Kerry said recently:

"We have to accelerate the clean energy transition, and, my friends, it takes money to do that."

— John Kerry

An International Energy Agency report put out last year found that to reach net zero by mid-century... The world will need to ramp clean energy spending up to more than $4 trillion annually by 2030. $4 trillion... every year.

Where do you think that money is going to flow to? I can tell you it's not going to go to your pocket or mine. It's going to go to all their cronies, lining the pockets of all those people who are part of this plan.

That's why Biden's Puppet Master has already struck deals with major corporations such as Amazon, Apple, Bank of America, Boeing, and many others. And they've all pledged to force a demand for "green" products. With central bankers, billionaires, major corporations, the media, members of Congress, the White House... And pretty much all of the most powerful people in the entire world all behind this plan...

There's no way to stop it.

And very soon, I believe their crazy climate conspiracies will go from corporations... directly to you and me.

Big Brother Is Coming...

Soon they will start tracking our individual carbon footprints.

Biden's Puppet Master is already working with corporations like the Chinese company Alibaba to make sure that happens. Once they track your individual carbon footprint... They'll be able to track where you travel. What you eat. And how you live. Pretty scary, right?

Biden's Puppet Master even launched an initiative called "My Carbon," defending the idea that we should track everyone's carbon footprint. Why would they want to track your carbon footprint? I believe they want each of us to have a personal carbon allowance.

As a recent Nature journal piece notes, COVID-19 lockdowns have prepared people for "personal carbon allowances." The piece wrote that restrictions on individual freedoms "that were unthinkable only one year before" have us "more prepared to accept the tracking and limitations" to "achieve a safer climate."

Their propaganda machine is already working to normalize this idea. And they're already starting to implement it.

us

Al Gore, Google Back Satellite Database To Track 'Individual Emitters' Of CO2

Former Vice President Al Gore has partnered with Google to use satellite technology to track "individual emitters" of greenhouse gasses around the world.

Tracking = Controlling

Listen closely, because here's the crux of everything I'm warning you about today: Once a government is able to track you, they're able to control you. If they think you're using up too much oil and gas to heat your home... they'll simply turn down your thermostat. They'll be able to control you.

If they think you're eating too much red meat, fed by cows who emit carbon... They'll only allow you to eat that awful "meatless meat" they're selling in stores now. If you don't comply... they'll force you to comply. They'll be able to control you.

Remember, power and control are what they're really after.

Once the individual carbon footprint is in place, the only thing missing will be a compliance mechanism. Something that forces you to comply.

And that's what really keeps me up at night.

Pay close attention to what I'm about to say, because almost no one else is telling you about what's coming and how to prepare.

Programmable Money Is Coming To Your Bank Account Soon

I believe they're going to enforce your personal "carbon allowance" by introducing a new type of U.S. dollar...

A digital dollar that would give them complete control of your money. Unlike the current dollar, this new digital dollar would not exist in physical form. You wouldn't be able to go to a bank or ATM and withdraw it. It's a digital currency, but it's very different from bitcoin.

Cryptocurrencies like bitcoin operate on blockchain technology, which is decentralized by design.

Digital U.S. dollars, on the other hand, would be centralized, completely traceable and programmable by the Puppet Masters.

In late 2021, Biden's Puppet Master announced a plan to work with the U.S. government and corporations to develop a digital dollar.

At that time, he said:

"[The plan] has built on our long history of public-private cooperation to accelerate necessary and timely conversations for digital currency deployment."

— Biden's Puppet Master

Of course, shortly after the Puppet Master made that statement, the Federal Reserve released a paper saying:

"The Federal Reserve is considering how a [digital dollar] might fit into the U.S. money and payments landscape. The introduction of a [digital dollar] would represent a highly significant innovation in American money."

— The Federal Reserve

Once again, straight from the Puppet Master's mouth to U.S. policy.

Is this just a coincidence?

Then a few months later, President Biden signed an executive order that said, and I quote...

The Puppet Master

"My Administration places the highest urgency on research and development efforts into the potential design and deployment options of a United States [digital dollar]."

— Joe Biden

So the White House is telling us exactly how they're planning to use this digital dollar. And once you combine this carbon tracking ability with a digital dollar... Then it's game over.

The Plan For Complete Control

Imagine the following scenario...

Let's say you want to fly to visit your kids and grandkids to spend thanksgiving together.

With a digital dollar, they will be able to ban you from buying tickets if you're considered a "big polluter." But you're not allowed to buy tickets because you already flew too many times this year, and you've met your personal carbon allowance limit. This would happen automatically because the digital dollar would be coded to "stop working" for certain purchases under certain circumstances. For example, if you go over your personal carbon allowance...

They could even impose fees and punish you by withdrawing money directly from your account.

Biden's Puppet Master said it himself.

"Polluters will have to pay to emit carbon dioxide. This will help make fossil fuels history"

— Biden's Puppet Master

He's already working with big banks to make sure nobody who's considered a polluter can get a loan.

The banks involved?

Bank of America, Wells Fargo, Morgan Stanley, JPMorgan Chase, Goldman Sachs, and Citigroup. They're all already planning to include energy ratings in their mortgage decisions.

Or look at gas-powered cars.

Biden's administration already declared they want to ban them.

Biden's Transportation secretary wants feds to ban gas cars nationwide ASAP

Posted by ClarkCountyToday.com Date: Thursday, September 15, 2022 In: News, Transportation

His Transportation Secretary Pete Buttigieg said that "we've got to make sure that this happens quickly enough to beat climate change."

Soon, once they're able to track your "personal carbon footprint..." They could make your "digital dollars" stop working at the gas pump once you've purchased a certain amount of gasoline in a week. Or they could ban your car outright, so you wouldn't be able to put gas in your car... Or even purchase a gas-powered vehicle.

In other words, they'd have complete control over what kind of car you're allowed to drive.

They could also decide what kind of food you're allowed to eat.

For example, if you go to the website of Biden's Puppet Master, you'll find an article that says that...

"The consumption and production of meat contributes significantly to climate change."

In other words, the Puppet Master believes meat is bad for the environment.

With the digital dollar, they would be able to easily ban or limit your purchase of red meat... all for "the greater good."

Biden's Puppet Master's organization even issued this prediction:

"You'll eat much less meat for the good of the environment."

— Biden's Puppet Master

Perhaps, that's why they're trying to normalize the idea of eating

The Puppet Master

bugs.

It's so strange that you can't make this stuff up. Check out this tweet, directly from his organization:

Forget burgers, think bugs. Read more:

Instead of burgers, they want you to eat crickets. I'm not kidding. His minions in the mainstream media are also getting behind this propaganda...

With CNN predicting:

"In a morning in the not-too-distant future, you might toast bread made with cricket flour, drink a protein smoothie made from locust powder, and eat scrambled eggs (made extra-creamy with the fat from mopane caterpillars) with a side of mealworm bacon."

— CNN

Sounds delicious, right?

If all this sounds extreme to you, let me remind you again that Biden's Puppet Master said...

"No extreme scenario can now be taken off the table"

— Biden's Puppet Master

Already in California and New York... Government officials are doing all types of silly things, like threatening to ban gas stoves, to save the environment. In fact, this goes well beyond just climate change...

Your Freedoms Could Soon Be "Turned Off"

Once they flip the switch on the digital dollar, they could control every aspect of your life.

Let's say for example you want to buy a pillow from the founder of MyPillow and Trump supporter Mike Lindell. Sorry, you can't get a good night's sleep because he's considered part of the dangerous MAGA movement.

Not updated on your tenth COVID booster shot? Sorry, your digital dollars won't work anywhere until you get that shot.

Want to donate money to your church? Sorry, you're not allowed because your church doesn't support the right to "choose" an abortion.

Want to support a politician? Only if you're donating to candidates in the Puppet Master's preferred "party."

Trying to buy any book that criticizes the government? Sorry, you're not allowed because that book is full of "dangerous misinformation" that doesn't support their narratives.

Did you say anything on social media that goes against their narrative? They could label you as a spreader of misinformation and completely cut off your access to your own bank account until you delete your social media post.

Are you considered "the wrong race" and making more money than the average American?

They could say you have "white privilege" and automatically withdraw money from your account to fund a "universal basic income" program.

With the digital dollar, Biden would also finally be able to ban assault weapons, like he's been promising. And he'd be able to do it without having to pass a single new law. Once a "digital dollar" is here, they could easily program the digital dollar to "stop working" for certain guns or ammunition.

The opportunities for them are limitless, and frankly... terrifying. So just ask yourself...

The Puppet Master

Do you think President Biden and his puppet master would like to have that kind of power over you? And do you want a team like Joe Biden's to have their hand on the levers of this power?

And here's the really scary part: A digital dollar isn't some far off event.

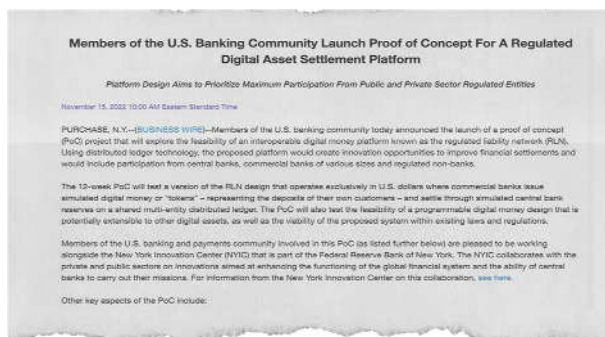

You don't have a decade to prepare. The infrastructure for their "programmable money" is already being built...

Not Some Far-Off, Distant Event

And like I mentioned before, they just launched a pilot program.

Our central bank, the Federal Reserve, just announced a 12-week digital dollar pilot with a few global banking giants... Like Citigroup, HSBC, Mastercard and Wells Fargo.

You're looking at the press release on your screen...

"It's clear that the Biden administration and Fed are working together to create a controllable, traceable, programmable digital currency. And if they are successful, life in America might never be the same."

— The Hill

I believe they're going to roll it out across the nation soon after the pilot program concludes.

Just listen to what Citigroup executive Tony McLaughlin said:

"Programmable US dollars may be necessary to support new business models. Projects like this, that focus on the digitization of central bank money and individual bank deposits, could be expanded."

— Tony McLaughlin

He's essentially saying he wants to expand this to include your bank deposit... Your checking and savings accounts. And let me remind you that Bank of America, Chase, Citi Group, Goldman Sachs, Morgan Stanley and Wells Fargo have all already partnered with Joe Biden's Puppet Master. These are the six largest banks in America.

So there's already a very good chance you're banking with one of them.

Those are basically all the companies that run our entire financial system. After everything I showed you today, if you still think none of this is a problem... I don't know what else to tell you.

Why would they launch a pilot program with all these banks if they were not planning to roll it out?

Now, I promised I would reveal who Biden's Puppet Master is...

If you haven't figured it out by now, his name is Klaus Schwab and he's the founder and president of the World Economic Forum.

Which is arguably the most influential platform in the world.

As Economics professor Anthony Mueller, says, the main purpose of the WEF is "global control"

Fox Business described his organization as....

From this point, the article goes on to offer subscriptions to the author's (Andrew Zatlin) course Moneyball Alpha Sector on how to protect yourself from being controlled by the new digital monetary system.

I believe the information in this article is true and accurately forecasts the new energy and monetary policies that will be foisted upon the developed western world by the powers that be in the name of human survival but actually arising from human greed and lust for power. For myself I did not purchase the Moneyball Sector Alpha course because I believe I have my own methods to protect against the coming financial and economic crisis. Note, I do not receive any monetary consideration for presenting Mr. Zatlin's article in this newsletter. Nor will I receive any consideration or monetary gain if any reader herein subscribes to Mr. Zatlin's course Moneyball Alpha Sector.

However, if you are interested in Money Ball Alpha Sector course, you may find information on it at www.newsdirect.com
